A western romance novella, about 33,000 words. Jedediah left his home and the farm his father expected him to take over to seek his fortune in the gold fields of Wyoming. He was a failure mining, and homesteaded a farm outside of Laramie. Under the tutelage of his friend and neighbor, he added to his land holdings. Sustained by the success of his vegetable crops and buoyed by the high prices he was able to get for them, he added ranching to his business. He grew tired of living alone and placed an ad for a wife. A mail order bride. Sarah Hardings first and only love was killed in Spotsylvania before they married. When her mother began inviting older men to dinner and to court her, she rebelled and placed an ad for a husband. Read about their long distance courtship and marriage, and the battles they had with the ravages of hoof and mouth disease in their herd and other frontier hardships before they were successful
